Microsoft Learn Career Connected

Microsoft partners and customers need people who have the skills to help expand their business. With the knowledge you've acquired from the classroom or in your career so far, we can help you get the technical skills you need, meet the employers that are hiring, and get the job you want.

Four steps to your new or next career

Microsoft Learn Career Connected currently brings together job seekers and companies looking for people interested in Dynamics 365, Azure, Azure Data, Azure AI, security / cybersecurity, or Power Platform.

  Explore Career Paths

  Learn about different careers and the learning needed to develop the skills to be successful.

  Get Prepared

  Get prepared for your next role through different programs to fit your learning style and schedule.

  Optimize your LinkedIn Profile

  Ensure you are getting noticed by potential employers by making the most of your LinkedIn profile.

  Get Connected

  Connect directly with Microsoft partners and customers looking to hire people with recently acquired skills in Microsoft technologies.

Step 1: Explore career paths

Microsoft technologies are used by our customers and partners to run everything from your local coffee shop to building spaceships. Functional consultants, data analysts, security engineers, and developers, are just some of the roles that are in high demand. Whatever your interests, let us help you find the right career path for you.

Step 2: Get prepared

Our Microsoft Learn Career Connected program provides various methods that allow you to level up your skills to prepare for your new career path. If you are someone that learns best at your own pace, you can utilize Microsoft Learn to increase your skills. If you prefer to learn through a more structured approach, we have organizations that can recruit and train, learning partners to teach you new skills, local universities, nonprofits, and other programs that can help you prepare for your new career. You choose the best way to get the skills for your new career.
